"Fort Greene," at Venus. Organized by Adrienne Rubenstein, director of the Canada gallery in New York, the exhibition charts the web of visual and other connections among a group of New York artists. Of particular interest are the enigmatic geometric assemblages of Sarah Braman, the slightly magical paintings of Alex Chaves, the vibrant domestic settings of Bella Foster and a sculpture of John Waters' head by John De Fazio that also doubles as a bong. Heady all around.

Through Oct. 29. 601 S. Anderson St., Boyle Heights, venusovermanhattan.com.
